Real Light On Russia.

So many conflicting reports as to conditions in Soviet Russia have been given to the public in recent years, and it has been so difficult to distinguish in such reports what is pure propagnada either for or against the political and economic systems now prevailing in that vast country, that people have developed the habit of shrugging their shoulders when Russia in mentioned and refusing to place reliance in much that is told them. It was, therefore, with unusual interest that delegates to the Worlfa's Grain Conference at Regina listened to the first hand knowledge which was brought to them by the Soviet Covernment for several years in connection with its gignatuc plans for the mechanisation of agriculture as part of its famous five-year plan.

Stirniman had no political axe to grind, he had no propaganda to "a vorminal had no pointest axe to grind, he had no propagatons to pared, Jie merely tool an unvariabled story to the assembled world grain experts of the situation as he personally knew it to exist in Russia. And anamuch as agricultural development in Russia cannot but have a direct effect on agriculture in Western Canada, it is of interest and value to have Mr. Stirminars' after-band information.

Mr. Stirminan's first-hand information.

Quoting Littrionf, Soviet Commissar of Foreign Relations, as stating at Geneva last June that "unemployment, wage cuts, and strikes were unknown in the land of the Soviet," Mr. Stirminan commented that they were impossible in a country "where bread cards are granted only to the obedient worker." Control of the country's food supply precluded strikes, he said.
There is no unemployment because the country's census takes no account of any but the workers—the unfortunates do not officially exist. There is no necessity for wage cuts for the money the government pays its workers has

The Russian could meet conditions in his plodding peasant life, but uproted and the reserve supplies taken from him, he has, no way to cope with whiter's cold and the fearful witter him, and the supply and the supply are reduced to almost nothing Housing has become more and more congested in the industrial and agricultural centres promoted by the Roviet.

Describing the systems of farming, Mr. Sitrathana said farmers lived the values of the supply and the su

A Soviet State farm is never an independent farm in the western world sense. It remains only the link in a yeat network of farms, with Mosewa the center from which emandes all plant, orders and supplies. The man directing these farms is not often an agriculturist nor even an engineer. The eather corp is wheat.

State farms are under the direction of a resident farm superintendent. He has several assistants, all with offices and residences in the main settlements. There are directors of the institute, the experimental station, and or grain production. Each of these have further assistants, the number ever growing without end. All were specialists and did no manual labor. The administrative class grows larger and the working class relatively smaller, working class gains a recruits from only the more remote districts and in the seasons of intensive work the womens are brought in as "pinch hilters." Now, in 1933, it has become necessary to drive the office class back to the farm. Describing how everything is centralized in Moscow, how even a prac-Everything down to the smallest detail, is dictated from Moscow, and control maintained through a collection of fines, taxes and shares of crop. There is never any lessening of centralization by any such name in official circles It is always neatily explained as an increasing of power in some particular facial. This brings us to a very important consideration in a government dominated by five to seven per cent. of the population and it is this, Party Men must be kept in all the major agricultural posts, regardless of ability among "comrades" because in these officials lies the power to control food, production, farming methods, all expenditure, education of the worker food, production, farming methods, all expenditure, aducation of the worker food, production, farming methods, all expenditure, aducation of the worker food, production, farming methods, all expenditures and farm engineering cannot be exparated."
